Ryan ................................................................. 40, married, JAMES’s father

TIME: Present day – Sunny afternoon.

SETTING: The Aquarium.
SEA TURTLES

(AT RISE we see a jellyfish and sea turtle exhibit. RYAN is holding a jacket while JAMES is holding a stuffed animal named Lenny that is a sea turtle. JAMES and RYAN start offstage.)

JAMES
WOAH! Dad … look at them! This one is sooooooooo big! Dad –

(JAMES and RYAN enter.)

RYAN
HEY! Be careful. Don’t run or you’re going to get hurt.

JAMES
These jellyfishes are so colorful. This one has stripes! You wanna know something cool? Jellyfish don’t have brains.

RYAN
Are you serious bud? That’s pretty weird, huh? It would be weirder if I didn’t have a brain …

(RYAN starts to tickle JAMES while impersonating a jellyfish. They laugh. Something catches JAMES’s eye. He runs.)

JAMES
Dad.
(pause)
Dad. It’s—it’s … wonderful. Sea turtles.

RYAN
I know. Do you see that one? You know what kind of turtle—

JAMES
Yeah. A green sea turtle… My teacher says they’re endangered dad. What does that mean?

RYAN
It means that they’re close to being extinct.
JAMES
(gasp)
Like the dinosaurs??!! Dad they can’t be like them. Sea turtles are my favorite animals—especially the green ones.

RYAN
It’s okay! As long as we help them then they will stay on Earth for a very long time.

JAMES
LOOK DAD! Look at the baby one. He looks just like Lenny.

RYAN
I see! Do you wanna know something cool? He probably was the only few out of 100 of his siblings to make it to the sea. He’s the lucky one.

JAMES
Well, what happened to the other ones?

RYAN
They … they didn’t make it to the ocean.

Why not?

RYAN
They died, son.

JAMES
They died? Well—why?

RYAN
Yes. For many reasons. Because they don’t get to the ocean quick enough so they dry up and die. Or because bigger animals eat them. It’s okay though. His siblings are in a better place.

JAMES
(concerned)
Where are their parents?

RYAN
In the ocean somewhere.

JAMES
Why would they leave their children in the ocean?
RYAN
I’m not sure, bud. It’s just the way things are.

(JAMES sits. A few moments later RYAN joins him. Both are facing the sea turtles.)

JAMES Dad?

RYAN
Yes?

JAMES
Are you mad at mommy?

RYAN
No.

JAMES
Well—why do you always yell at her? Did you forget to flush, again?

(RYAN knows where this is going and tries to avoid the question he was just asked, hoping JAMES will forget about it.)

JAMES
I hear you guys at night—

RYAN
When you’re supposed to sleep?

JAMES
Yes.

(pause)
But I can’t sleep because you guys are so loud. Are you gonna divorce mommy?

RYAN
James how do you know what a divorce is?!

JAMES
Mark from class told me.

(pause)
Well… are you?

RYAN

No! No. Me and mommy are not getting a divorce.

JAMES

So why do you guys argue so much?

(RYAN doesn’t want to answer that question.)

RYAN

It’s just … mommy makes me mad—

JAMES

So you yell at her? When I get mad at my classmates, I don’t yell at them. Or Mrs. Lampert will make me go in the time out corner.

RYAN

That’s different.

JAMES

I know, but—

RYAN

James, you don’t understand. It’s a grownup thing. When people are married, things happen and they argue. It happens in every marriage—it’s normal.

JAMES

Just because it’s normal doesn’t mean it has to happen.

(Pause.)

JAMES

Dad. I know I don’t know many things, but I know that you shouldn’t yell at mommy. It hurts her feelings and mines too.

RYAN

We just aren’t getting along right now. That’s it. I still love her – and I still love you.

JAMES

I don’t get it—
RYAN
I know you don’t. And that’s okay but being an adult isn’t as easy as you think.

JAMES
How come?

RYAN
Because you have so many things to worry about.

JAMES
Well don’t worry about them dad.

RYAN
James let’s stop talking about it, okay?

JAMES
Why?

RYAN
Because I said so.

JAMES
But I—

RYAN
JAMES!

JAMES
Dad, I just—

RYAN
James! WHAT DID I JUST SAY? … NOW STOP IT!

(Pause.)

JAMES Okay …

RYAN
Oh—oh … don’t cry! I didn’t mean to yell at you.

(pause)
It’s just that—okay look—mommy did something bad. Really really bad and …. daddy just doesn’t know how to handle it.
What did she do?

I can’t tell you James.

Well, I’m sure it’s something that can be fixed.

It’s not that simple. It’s not at all. I wish it was that easy bud, but it’s not. It’s—It’s complicated.

But it can be simple right? It doesn’t have to be complicated between you and mommy.

No … no it doesn’t.

She just has to apologize right? And make you laugh. Mrs. Lampert teaches us that in class. It works—it really does. I make Mark laugh all the time.

Mommy just has to do something really nice for you. You know like something nice that’ll make you smile. Maybe she could … let you use the TV in the living room. Or … or maybe she can take you to get a hotdog—like you do with me. See, that’s all dad.

(JAMES realizes nothing he says is working. RYAN is growing more and more sad.)

Hey, dad? Here you go.

Why are you giving me Lenny?

I want you to have him.

But Lenny is your bestfriend. You can’t give—

I want you and mommy to be the lucky ones.
(RYAN takes the stuffed animal and hugs JAMES. They stand up and begin to exit.)

JAMES

Dad?

RYAN

Yeah?

JAMES

What do you call a sea turtle that flies? A shell-icopter.

(RYAN laughs.)

JAMES

See. I told you it works. I made you laugh.

RYAN

(smiling at JAMES)

I love you son.

JAMES

I love you too dad.

(Curtain.)
